HPC Status: Not designated
Recommendation: Not eligible
SHPO #: RA-SPC-0879
Significance:
This small brick church, built in 1918, is one of several small brick churches in the area, and one of the most intact. Although the original congregation may have been associated with the German immigrant community, this building was constructed later and does not appear to be significantly associated with early immigrants. Although designed by William Alban, it does not appear to significantly represent his work. Therefore, this building is recommended as not eligible for the NRHP.

Significance:
Although this is one of several modest, basically intact Victorian houses on Sherburne between Dale and Kent Streets, it does not individually meet the criteria for historical significance. While exhibiting good architectural details of the period, the building does not appear to be the work of a master. Maas is not believed to be a person important in our past, and the house is not known to be associated with significant events. Furthermore, although there are several houses nearby that also exhibit period
