Integrity

The overall integrity of this structure is good.

Description

The building historically named Aurora Sash and Door Company was constructed in 1914 in a utilitarian, industrial style. The structure has a flat roof and single, segmental-arched 1/1 windows. The foundation is stone and concrete and the exterior wall covering is painted brick of 6 course American bond. The front (north) façade contains five windows, a wide loading bay near the west end, and a standard-sized door near the east end leads to the office extension. A central door has been filled with brick. All doors are raised about three feet from the ground to accommodate a loading dock (now missing). A low-pitch gabled structure extends back on the deep lot. It is constructed of red brick with a concrete block foundation and has 1/1 double-hung sash, segmental-arch windows. The slope of the lot provides for a full basement exposed on the south end. Several metal pipe chimneys extend from the roof and walls of this industrial building. A painted sign on the front (north) façade reads "St. Paul Electro Plating."

EVALUATION AND ANALYSIS

Historical Context

Urban Centers, 1870-1940

Historical Narrative

This building was constructed at an estimated cost of $2,000 as a factory for the Aurora Sash and Door Company. Andrew Olson, who lived at 622 E. Magnolia Avenue, was the president of this company in 1915. In 1915, a $1,200 addition was made to the building. By 1926, the building is identified as an electro-plating company (Sanborn Map Co. 1926). A search of obituaries for Andrew Olson in Hennepin and Ramsey counties did not find the Andrew Olson associated with this property.

Significance and Recommendations

A small early twentieth century industrial building tucked behind the University Avenue commercial development near Lexington and is one of the few early, small-scale manufacturing facilities from this early period in the area. However, the business associated with this property does not appear to have been a historically significant venture. Architecturally, the building is typical of the period and does not appear to be the work of a master. No information on Andrew Olson, the proprietor of the company, could be found to identify him as a person important in our past.

Integrity

Several alterations have been made to this house, including a rear addition and probably the insertion of a picture window on the front façade.

Description

This 1924 house was built in the Prairie style with a foursquare plan. The two-story building has stucco siding with a brick base. Fenestration is comprised of single and paired 3/1 double-hung sash windows, with a band of three located on the east (front) façade of the second story. A picture (possibly not original) is located on the east façade of the first story, overlooking the porch. The front porch is formed by brick and has a shallow bracketed covering. A modern awning has extends over the porch area. A sun porch extends from the southeast corner of the house. The hipped roof has wide eaves, asphalt shingles, and features an eyebrow dormer. A two-story addition has been placed on the rear (west) façade).

Historical Context

Urban Centers, 1870-1940

Historical Narrative

This house was constructed in 1924 as the residence of Arlick J. Levander. According to the 1920 directory, A. J. Levander was serving as the treasurer of the Twin City Motor Bus Company in that year, but by 1930 he had become the manger of the Union Bus Depot located at 401 St. Peter in St. Paul. He and his wife Emma resided at 511 Lexington.

Significance and Recommendations

The integrity of this Prairie style home is fair. The building is not associated any significant events or persons, nor is the architect known. Individually, this building does not appear to be architecturally distinguished or historically significant.

Integrity

The original design is basically intact and unaltered, and the physical condition of the building is good. A replacement cornerstone reads "First Church of the Nazarene, 1950".

Description

The St. Matthew's Lutheran Church was constructed in the Gothic Revival Style in 1918. The Church has two stories and a gabled roof with asphalt shingles. The fenestration is comprised of 1/1 double-hung sash with Gothic arches and stained glass. The foundation is limestone. The main exterior wall covering is dark brown brick with stretcher bond. The main (east) façade is dominated by a central, four-story entrance tower with a Gothic arch stone entrance surround topped by a cross. The Gothic arch third-story window has a small rose window cut out of the frame. Atop the tower is an octagonal shingle-clad spire with a cross at the top and crenellated brick base with metal finials at the corners. The front double doors have a stained glass transom with Gothic tracery. Side aisles have Gothic arch stained glass windows. The stained glass is very unusual with fine details and blue and gray coloring. The building has buttresses with stone caps.

Related Outbuildings

None.

EVALUATION AND ANALYSIS

Historical Context

Urban Centers, 1870-1940

Historical Narrative

St. Matthew's Evangelical Lutheran Church congregation was organized in the summer of 1887 under the leadership of Dr. Edward Kaiser. The first church was constructed at this site in 1888 from designs by St. Paul architect Moritz L. Weiser. The church was destroyed by fire Feb. 1, 1918 and the present church was built on the same site at an estimated cost of $6,000.

The architect of the present church, William L. Alban, also designed the Fairmount Avenue United Methodist Church (1917) at 1523 W. Fairmount, the Payne Avenue State Bank (1923) at 961 N. Payne, and a house at 1259 Hague (1913). Alban was in partnership with Martin P. Thori and James E. Fisher, and with Fisher alone, prior to establishing his own practice sometime around World War I. St. Matthew's congregation remained in the church until 1950 or 1951. Since then, the building has housed the First Church of the Nazarene (ca. 1954-63), St. John's Church of God in Christ (1964-67), Lively Stone Temple of Jesus Christ Apostolic Faith (1968-?), and the Rock of Ages Missionary Baptist Church (?-present).

Significance and Recommendations

This small brick church, built in 1918, is one of several small brick churches in the area, and one of the most intact. Although the original congregation may have been associated with the German immigrant community, this building was constructed later and does not appear to be significantly associated with early immigrants. Although designed by William Alban, it does not appear to significantly represent his work. Therefore, this building is recommended as not eligible for the NRHP.

Integrity

This church's integrity has been significantly altered, primarily by the application of vinyl siding. Not only has the vinyl siding obscured the original siding material, it has also covered the original openings in the tower.

Description

The structure historically known as the Emmanuel Lutheran Church was constructed in the Gothic Revival Style in 1915. This frame building has a hipped roof with an intersecting gable roof, which is currently shingled with asphalt. The structure has one internal brick, end wall chimney, and Gothic arch, fixed window fenestration. The foundation is limestone covered with a skim coat. The main exterior wall covering is comprised of vinyl clapboards. The structure has a two-story square corner entry tower with spire, and a Gothic arch entrance. Large pointed arched windows on the north, west, and east facades of the tower have been covered by vinyl siding. Large Gothic arch windows on the west and east facades are beneath gable ends.

Historical Context

Urban Centers, 1870-1940

Historical Narrative

This church was built in 1915 for an estimated cost of $5,000. The first congregation to worship here was the Emmanuel Lutheran Church. Subsequently it was the Aurora Methodist Episcopal Church., and then St. Albans Church of God in Christ.

Significance and Recommendations

The alterations made to the church, particularly the application of vinyl siding, significantly compromise this properties hisotircal integrity, making it unable to convey any historical significance. Therefore, this property is recommended as not eligible for the NRHP.

Integrity

The original design is largely intact, and the building is in good condition. Aluminum combination windows have been added.

Description

The one-and-a-half-story Herman Maas House was built in 1900 in the vernacular Folk Victorian style. The home has one bay and an intersecting gable roof with cornice returns and asphalt shingles. The home has one internal brick chimney and a limestone foundation. The main exterior wall covering is brown brick with stretcher bond. The intact, L-shaped porch has turned columns, fretwork, balusters, and brackets with a perforated floral motif. A large fixed window with transom and sidelights is located on the main façade.

Historical Context

Urban Centers, 1870-1940

Historical Narrative

The original owner and first resident of this house was Herman J. Maas, a driver for George Benz and Sons, jobbers and distillers of wines and liquors. The Benz firm was located at the northeast corner of 6th and Minnesota Streets.

Significance and Recommendations

Although this is one of several modest, basically intact Victorian houses on Sherburne between Dale and Kent Streets, it does not individually meet the criteria for historical significance. While exhibiting good architectural details of the period, the building does not appear to be the work of a master. Maas is not believed to be a person important in our past, and the house is not known to be associated with significant events. Furthermore, although there are several houses nearby that also exhibit period architecture and good integrity, the cluster is not sufficient in number nor in significance to comprise a historic district.
