INFORMATION
Park Use Demographics

Raintry Salk presented on the 2016 Regional Parks System Visitor Study. Data was collected from visitors in all 117 regional park and trail units open to the public. A total of 5,459 visitors participated in the study. Additional analysis was done in 2018 to explore sociodemographic differences between regional parks visitors and the population in the region. The socioeconomic and demographic variables explored included: race and ethnicity, annual household income, disability status, age, educational attainment, and gender. Salk reviewed the data and fielded questions from Council members. A comparison of 2016 visitor data to Census data reveal disparities exit at both the regional and agency-level, and other subpopulations should be a focal area of the policy plan, specifically educational attainment and gender produced disparities.
